Turnover (excluding VAT or other sales taxes) comprises the value of sales of licenses to the company intellectual property and any related support and maintenance fees. For those products which are designed to meet the specific requirements of each customer, revenue is recognised on a percentage-to-completion basis over the period from signing the license to customer acceptance. Support and maintenance is recognised on a straight-line basis over the period for which it is contractually agreed with the customer. Revenue from consulting is recognised when the service has been provided and all obligations to the customer have been fulfilled.

Where invoicing milestones are such that management's view of progress through each project (as detailed above) is more than has been invoiced to the customer, the company evaluates whether it has obtained through performance to date the right to the uninvoiced consideration and whether revenue should be recognised. Any revenue recognised in excess of amounts invoiced is recorded as accrued income. Any amount invoiced in excess of revenue recognised is recorded as deferred income.
